

Abstract

A method of manufacturing a multilayered cementitious product comprising the steps of combining a cementitious material with water within a mixing container 5 so as to form an aqueous slurry discharging the slurry from said mixing container through an outlet onto a support and inserting a setting accelerator into said slurry at or close to the outlet of the mixing container.